I find the internet to be a great source of painting instruction. Often I will spend some time watching videos of other artist. All the different painting approaches or techniques are amazing.

The other day I was on the web again and found a video by an artist named Paul Taggart who was teaching on how to mix a specific watercolor. He discussed the three components of color: hue; value; and intensity. Paul said if we control each of these separately we can mix any color.

I cannot do the subject justice as he can, so I recommend this web site to anyone and everyone. I am sure we could all learn something, if not a lot, viewing this video. Go to www.artworkshopwithpaul.com and look for "How to mix a specific color."

I hope you will watch this and give me your feedback if you will.

Enjoy your summer and stay safe on the highways. I will be gone the first part of July to B.C. and will be back around the 12th. Happy July 4th.

Garven

Please note the July 9 meeting will be at Nina Dempsey's house and will be a potluck/plein air painting gathering starting at noon.

The Real Change Portrait Project

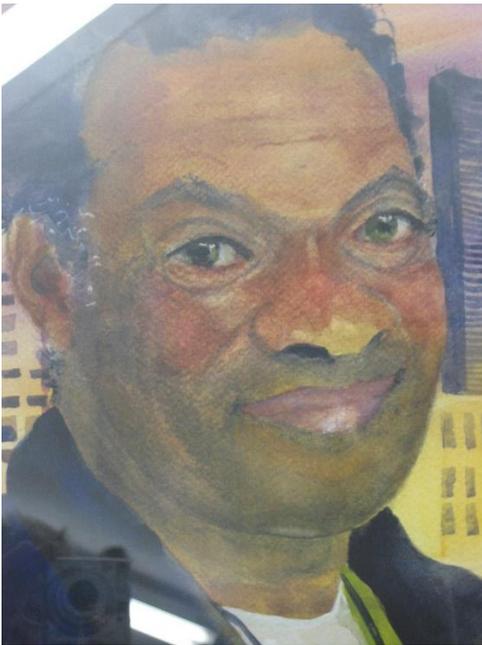

The Real Change Portrait Project was founded by Jon Williams, Art Director at Real Change. Real Change is a weekly newspaper, created in Seattle in 1994 by Timothy Harris. The paper covers issues of social justice and homelessness. There are more than 300 homeless and low income vendors who sell Real Change in Seattle, Bellevue and Kitsap County. Vendors buy the publication for sixty cents and resell it for two dollars. They keep the profit. Real Change offers homeless people a low barrier way to make money, because they are not required to undergo a background check or show identification to sell the paper. Vendors need only abide by the Real Change code of conduct.

Jon wanted to raise awareness of the mission of Real Change as the non-profit Seattle newspaper expanded from Seattle into Bellevue and Kitsap County. The project gives local artists a chance to paint a portrait of one of the vendors for the paper, all of whom are either homeless, or low income. The portraits give the general public an educated view of the challenges facing the homeless today, showing an ordinary face to the often misunderstood views on homelessness.

Real Change is asking for more artists to add to the collection. Each time the show changes venues, it grows. Artists of any skill level are encouraged to submit work in any medium. Interested artists should contact jonw@realchangenews.org or call 206 441 3247x208. Artists will be given a vendor's biography,, a high quality reference image and lots of encouragement.

Nina Dempsey's portrait of Michael Jones sold. Proceeds benefit the vendor. Maggie Huft is almost finished with her portrait. Wouldn't it be wonderful if more PAL members undertook this project?

The Real Change Portrait Show is at Artist's Edge in Poulsbo until the end of July.

Poulsbo Arts by the Bay Show

Attention Everyone, remember that we will participate in the Poulsbo Art Festival in August. The dates are August the 15th, 16th & 17th. All PAL members are invited to participate. All artists who participate need to sign-up to work a shift. Typically, each person can bring 2 large or 3 medium or 4 small paintings to the show. They need to be properly framed with wire for hanging. To sign-up, please contact Mike Clayton, show coordinator, at PAL on Wednesdays or call him at 360-930-8171. He has the sign-up sheet. For the new members that have not done this show, PAL sets up the Tents and hangs on Friday morning and we start the shifts at noon. The show normally closes at 6 PM on Sunday. Shifts are normally about 3 hours depending on how many participants we have. Question's, call Mike for more details.

Lisa and Jim Stowers have returned home from Sierra Leone on June 14

Lets hope Lisa stops by to visit after she gets acclimated to living in the USA. She certainly has some stories to tell and some art to share.

Laughter is the closest distance between two people. (Victor Borge)
